

ECO-WALK

Linking Communities

Sky Gardens & Decks

ECO Walk
@ PL 103.5 to PL 117.5

Landscape Deck
@ PL 110 to PL 111.9

Carpark Deck
@ PL 108.6

Promenade
@ PL 103.50

Physical Connectors

Inspired by the 'jambatan' decks of the Kelong kampung where pedestrian traffic is separated from the water vehicular traffic below, Eco-walk negotiates the distinctive landform by providing a layer of upper level connectivity. This links transport nodes such as the LRT to the precinct, its social/activity nodes to the waterfront, as well as in and about the surrounding neighbourhoods, integrated into the design as a series of gentle ramps and generous footpaths. Eco-walk provides friendly seamless accessibility, Eco-walk also doubles up as roofs of SCF, linkways and entrance features. This enables users of all ages to navigate and safely explore the precinct and use its facilities on foot or on bicycle, uninterrupted by the vehicular traffic traversing below.

Adrian and Olivia making their way to work

Mrs. Lopez bringing daughter back from morning play-school

All bringing Zoe to tuition classes at the education centre

Chee Meng and Kafe making their way to the common area to jog and play

Mr. Tan picking his father up at the drop-off along the carpark deck to go for dinner

Mrs. Muthusamy loading groceries to the car under the overhanging eaves of the Eco-Walk

Visual Connectivity & Delight

Whilst navigating along the footpaths, Eco-walk provides the residents and visitors with deliberate vistas into the various social/activity nodes within the precinct. These include lush green spaces as well as the waterfront. Besides providing cues to aid orientation, visual contact with these spaces seeks to create opportunities for community interaction and bonding, at the same time delighting the senses.

Random still-like columns with generous usage of eco-friendly composite timber recalls the 'kelong' decks, providing porosity throughout the development. Spaces that occur below the Eco-walk are occupied by commercial and social communal facilities or the carpark deck. There are also opportunities for future usage.

Alvin overlooking the rainforest whilst walking home after buying roti prata from the kopitiam

Auntie Rose enjoying the atrium courtyard whilst making her way to the supermarket to buy fresh produce

Enck Ai keeping a watchful eye on his grandchildren playing

Mr. Mark breathing in the fresh air over the retention pool after a downpour

Madam Zhang is greeted with a welcoming view of the precinct while making her way home from the LRT

Pierre and Andrea immersed in the romantic sunset of the waterfront

